NEGRO TELLS OF MURDER.

SAYS PRISONERS KILLED AND ROBBED UNIDENTIFIED MAN.

Woman, Who Refused to Give Her Name, Thinks Man Whose Body Was Found in the Harlem River Is a Relative

-Two Negroes Held for the Murder The police were inclined to believe last night that the body of the murdered man found in the Harlem River on Tuesday was that of a mechanic who lived in The Bronx, near Williamsbridge. They came to this conclusion after several persons had visited the East 126th street police station making inquiries for a man of athletic build who has been missing from his home in The Bronx for several days. The man referred to answers the description of the body in the Morgue. The wife of the missing man will view the body to-day.

The four negroes who were arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the murder were arraigned in the Harlem police court yesterday Two of them, Joseph Wilson of 156th street and Eighth avenue, and Charles Carter of 122d street a: I First avenue, were held for the action of the Coroner, who later committed them to the Tombs without bail on a charge of mur der. William Brown of 343 East 122d street, who was also locked up on suspicion, was discharged, as he satisfied the police that he was in no way connected with the crime. The fourth member of the quartette, Edward Cotton, 19 years old, of 423 East 124th street, who first informed the police that the man had been murdered, was committed by the Coroner to the House of committed by the Coroner to the House of Detention, where he will be held as a witness against Wilson and Carter.

Cotton repeated to Coroner Scholer the story he told to the police. He said that on Friday night the man had approached him and seemed to be intoxicated. He asked to be directed to a barber shop. Cotton told him where to go, and the man asked him to have a drink.

They went to the southeast corner of First They went to the southeast corner of First avenue and 125th street, where the man

Then, according to Cotton's story, Wilson and Carter came in and asked Cotton to treat them. He explained that he had no money, and the stranger volunteered to buy drinks for everybody.

After having several, Cotton said, one of the prisoners remarked that the stranger had exhibited $40 or $50, and that it was up to them to get the money.

They finally led the man to the pier, which extends into the Harlem River under the Willis avenue bridge. There all hands sat down and Wilson went back to the First avenue saloon and purchased a flask The negroes went with him, and when the man came out of the saloon Cotton said he saw Wilson drop something which ooked like snuff into the bottle they went back to the pier, and, after pre-tending to drink from the flask, the negroes passed it to the stranger. He drank half of the contents, Cotton said, and became "dopey."

"After that," said Cotton, "I saw Wilson and Carter attack the man. They both struck him. I feared they intended to kill him and I ran away. About an hour leter I again onet them. later I again met them.

One of them was carrying the clothing of the stranger and the other had the man's patent leather shoes. They offered me $5 patent leather snoes. They offered the so-not to squeal on them.

"Yesterday morning, when the body was found in the river, I thought it must be that of the stranger we had been drink-ing with, so I walked down to the Harlem morgue at the foot of East 120th street and recognized it."

Detectives Biordan, and Liston, who

and recognized it.
Detectives Riordan and Liston, who arrested Wilson and Carter, told the Coroner that while the men were locked up in the East 128th street station they discussed the case in their cells and called out to Cotton that they would do him when they got out if he squealed on them. The body was later removed to the Morgue, at the foot of Twenty-sixth street, and, although half a hundred persons viewed it, none of them was able to identify the dead man. Many believed that, being a man of muscular build, he was probman of muscular build, he was probably a member of an athletic club or a One man said he thought the dead man was Wrestler Roeber, but a few minutes later Roeber himself walked into the Morgue and remarked that the dead man did not look like a wrestler and that he was evi-

ly a man who had done hard work in About 9 o'clock last night a well-dressed woman, accompanied by a young man, went to the door of the East 126th street station and was about to enter when she stopped suddenly and said to the young man

You go in and inquire whether there are any scars on the body. Don't give your name or say anything about it, except your name or say anything about it, except to get a good description."

The young man entered the station and explained that he had a friend who had been missing from his home in The Bronx for several days.

He said his friend was of athletic build about 35 years old, smooth shaven, weighed about two hundred and twenty pounds and had black hair, closely cropped. This description tallied with that of the mur-The Sergeant on duty at the station advised him to go to the Morgue and view the body. When he got outside the police station he remarked to the woman;

"I guess there is no doubt about it. I am satisfied it's him."

Detective Liston questioned the woman closely, but she refused to tell her name or anything, further than to say she be-lieved the dead man was a relative who had said she resided at Williamsbridge.

She was anxious to know whether it was true that there were any scars on the body and was told that there were. She added that she had seen a picture of the murdered man in one of the newspapers and that it greatly resembled the man she was hunting

Two men who said they were from the Union Settlement Athletic Club in East 195th street went to the Morgue late last night and said they thought the body might be that of Max Brenner, a frequenter of the club, who had prided himself on his wrestling abilities.

They said they would bring some other men to the Morgue to-day who knew him better. They said, however, that they didn't know whether Brenner was missing or not

ONE CONVICT RECAPTURED.

Deputy Sheriff Gets the Drop on a Prison Who Escaped From Folsom Prison.

Folsom, Cal., Aug. 5 .- James Roberts, one of the convicts who escaped last week, was captured by Deputy Sheriff John Hiners of Sacramento this afternoon. The information that led to the capture came from William Newman, an ex-convict. Roberts and Howard, another escaped convict, were together, and the latter supposed to be still at Davisville. Howard is an opium fiend and prevailed on Newman to buy him some "dope." Newman procured it and then left the party going straight to the Sheriff's office nformation of the whereabouts and plans of the two convicts. Deputy Sheriff Hinters tracked the men to Davisville, where he came across Roberts this afternoon lying under some brush He covered Roberts with a rifle and ordered him to throw up his hands. Roberts didn't move at first. Hinters then threatened to shoot if the command were not immediately obeyed. Roberts then got up. His revolver was lying under him. Roberts admitted his identity.

NEW UNION OF HOUSESMITHS.

CHARTERED BY KNIGHTS OF LA-BOR (HAYES FACTION).

Houseshorers Who Are Willing to Work Also Organize, and Other Trades Will Follow-Fuller Co. Says It Approves the Arbitration Agreement.

The General Executive Board of the Knights of Labor held a conference yesterday with various building contractors at the headquarters of the Employers' Association, 1123 Broadway, regarding the furnishing of men under the arbitration agreement. The general officers have established headquarters at the Broadway Central Hotel.

The Knights say they can supply all the men needed in the building trades, and the employers will give them the chance.

In the meantime, the Housesmiths' Union of New York has been formed and has received a charter from the Knights. The new Houseshorers and Pile Drivers' Union has also got a charter, and the Knights are organizing local assemblies of the other trades.

The members of the Simon Burns faction of the Knights of Labor, which is opposed to General Master Workman Haves and his followers, are much aroused. Each side asserts that its men are the only genuine Knights. Besides being recognized by the employers here, the Hayes faction, however, has the books and property of the order and holds that the courts have decided in its favor.

Whether the unions which have been expelled from the Board of Building Trades will work with the newly organized Knights is not yet known. James J. Daly of the Tile Layers' Union, which has signed the arbitration agreement, said yesterday that the unions would not stand for anything that Hayes did.

It would seem to me that if it were accepted, the air would immediately be cleared and the members of the employers' association, as well as ourselves, and all the mechanics employed by your association and by our company, would be in a better condition than during many years past.

the New Broadway Subway. J. T. Brown, superintendent of the New York Tunnel Company, which has a contract for the lower Broadway section of the subway, had men at work in Battery Park yesterday taking down the old flagpole near the Barge Office. The pole was n two pieces, the lower 90 feet long and the upper 70 feet. The lower pole was 30 inches in diameter and weighed 6 tons.

The top part was first lowered and then used with a huge piece of timber to make a two pole derrick, with which to raise the bigger section from the ground. The pole will be repainted and set up in another part of the ground.

This pole has stood in the Battery Park for many years. Fast in cavities in the base of the pole were found several old coins and a cent, dated 1820.

PRAYER CUT OUT BY LION. Couple Married in Animals' Den at Luna Park Flustered Bridegroom

The "Carnival of Nations" day, scheduled for Luna Park yesterday was spoiled by the bad weather, and Frederic Thompson. head of the management, who had wagered $500 with Fred Henderson of Henderson's Music Hall, that Wednesday, Aug. 5 would be the biggest day Coney Island had ever seen, outside of a holiday, paid the bet at 6 o'clock last night.

"We lost our bet," said Mr. Thompson last night. "We failed to foresee weather conditions. But we had in the grounds during the day probably the largest crowd of out-of-town visitors that ever visited Coney Island on any one day. "During September we will have an Indian summer carnival, and my bet is still good with Henderson that we will bring to Luna Park and Coney Island generally the largest crowd ever seen here on an offday."

One of the two couples scheduled to be married in the lions' cage agreed to wait until Saturday, and Leo Stevens and La Strange decided to postpone their airship because of the weather. The second couple, Miss Isabel Timman and William E. Newham of Brooklyn, were pat in the Tenderloin Station After the Inspector Had Gone Over Captain's Head-The Wardman Wouldn't Say Whether a Prisoner Was Morrell or Not.

When Inspector Richard Walsh gets back from his vacation, one of his first official acts will be to press a complaint against Jimmy Armstrong, who is the wardman for Capt. O'Connor in the Tenderloin. Walsh drew up the complaint papers last night. He charges Armstrong with insolence and abusive language to a superior

The charge of insolence was due to an incident which happened in the Tenderloin station last evening. Inspector Walsh and his men had raided two alleged disorderly houses in West Thirty-second street, run by Frank Morrell. Inspector Walsh was getting ready to raid Morrell's disorderly houses and his gambling house when Morrell was tipped off, and closed up all three places. Since then the gambling house has remained closed, but the two houses have been open in the daytime.

The Inspector had been informed that the best time to catch Morrell was around 8 o'clock, so he sent Detectives Hibbard and Burns around there at that time last evening. A woman let them in, and as they gained an entrance a man ran out of a rear room and the detectives nabbed him. They thought they had Morrell, but were not sure. They lugged him and three women, around to the Tenderloin police station where Inspector Walsh awaited

They explained to Inspector Walsh that They explained to Inspector Walsh that they were not sure of the identity of the man. Jimmy Armstrong, the wardman, was in the house and Walsh asked him to identify the prisoner. Armstrong turned on the Inspector with a leer and said: "Why don't you ask the reporters? They seem to know a lot about this precinct." "I am asking you," said Walsh sharply.

"What do you mean by speaking so dis-respectfully to your superior officer?" The man whom Armstrong would not identify said he was Louis Brand of 208 West Twenty-ninth street. He was locked up charged with disorderly conduct. The three women were held on the same charge. Half an hour later Inspector Walsh's men raided another disorderly house in West Twenty-ninth street. They had no warrant for this house, either, but they had affidavits from several citizens about the character of the place, and six women were arrested.

Soon after the man who gave his name as Brand was locked up, Bob Nelson, the Tenderloin's professional bondsman, appeared. He gave hail for Brand. When the prisoner was brought up from a cell he covered his face with his coat, so it could not be seen. He went out of the were arrested police station this way, and ran all the way

BENEDICTION FROM PIUS X.

Through New York Priests. Pope Pius X. bestowed his first apostolic enediction on the Roman Catholics of America in a cable despatch received vesterday by Archbishop Farley. The plessing was sent through the Rev. Dr. Francis H. Wall, pastor of Holy Rosary Church, and the Rev. John E. Burke, rector of the Church of St. Benedict the Moor, both of this city. Father Burke and Dr.

Wall had a private audience with the Pope in which Pius X. authorized them to send

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN

"Munching" is a practice popular jus now at Newport and other summer resorts It also has the recognition of the King of England. Munching is one of the numerous preventives of extreme weight that appeal to persons who want to lose flesh, but are unwilling to deprive themselves of life's pleasures. It means merely very slow eating. Its theory is that every parti-cle of food must be chewed slowly and carefully until no solid material remains to be swallowed. Slow eating is merely carried to an extreme by the new treatmer All London society threatened with too much flesh is said to be chewing very long and very thoroughly and American converts to the system are already numerous. Its effect is said to be noticeable at dinners, which have come to be known as munch which have come to be known as munching parties, and are much less vivacious than they were when eating and drinking went on rapidly. Persons who eat slowly also eat much less than those who eat

Frank Work has solved the problem of a town summer in what looks like a very satisfactory fashion to those who have seen him taking his ease on the north side of Madison Square. Mr. Work's house is one of the few private residences re-maining on that block. His door is covered with a fancy iron grilling, and behind this the owner every evening takes his ease. He usually has the society of a friend, and he smokes in comfort with the park in from of him as a lawn.

Work looks less contented with the world when he walks through the cafe of the French restaurant half a block away from his home. There was a period when he was accustomed to spend much of his time in that building. The place was then the most conservative and representative of New York's restaurants. Mr. Wor looks with no apparent favor on the successors of his old friends who used to gathe there, and the expression of his face makes it plain that he considers these days degenerate compared to those he remember in the old home of the famous restaurant. "What in the world is that band?" asked one man of another, pointing to three colors of a very uncommon combination "I cannot think of any college that has those colors, or any club about here." The man with the strange ribbon turned out to be an acquaintance, and before long the conversation was brought around to that subject.

"Oh, that's the ribbon of my prep.school." the wearer said, "and I have it on at the special request of our headmaster. Many men have recently taken to wearing the colors of their preparatory school. My school, like several others I have heard of, sent out requests to its men to wear the school band occasionally. That helps to explain a lot of the freak hat bands seen around the city this summer.* Jean de Reszke's desire to come back o this country next season at the head of a small company shows that he has new management of the Metropolitan Opera House and yet feels the necessity of returning to this golden land for one season more at least. It was arranged a year ago that he was to sing this season at the Metropolitan under Mr. Grau's man-agement, but as he demanded of Mr. Conried twice as much as he had ever received under the old régime, it is not difficult to understand why no agreement was reached.

Mr. Grau told Mr. Conried it was bad policy to engage such a high-priced tenor under any circumstances before the first of August. Then, if the subscription was not promising, such an engagement was advisable. This year the subscription is larger than it ever was, and M. de Reszke is not needed as a life saver.
